

Client: hippih

Publication: ZIP

Date: 8th -14th March 2013

Circulation: tbc

hipKey

£69.95 FROM APPLE

It's all too easy to leave shit behind but this gadget, paired up with your iPad/iPhone, will give you a beep if you wander too far away from yours. It also stops light-fingered wankers from wandering off with your device - put it in motion mode and its ear-crushing sound will let rip. We await version two, complete with a 10,000-volt Taser.

Drill Gun

£29.99 FROM MENKIND.CO.UK

Strike fear into screws, this power driver comes with six changeable bits and the trigger motion sets the shooter to work. The rechargeable battery makes it an essential addition to your yawn-inducing toolkit. This thing even has a light at the end for night-time DIY - where's that buy button?

Brake Bike

£350 FROM BRAKEBIKE.COM

Single-gear pedal power is not for those who live near hills but such two-wheelers will give your pins a test even on the slightest of slopes. However, if you want to saddle up on a real head-turner and get those thighs into can-crushing shape, then choose from the 100 colour options available for this, the best-looking bike since the Chopper.

Samsung 8.0

£175 SEE SAMSUNG.COM/UK

Launched at a shindig in Barcelona, the latest in the line-up from the Korean giants takes another swipe at the smug fruit-based manufacturer. It has the S-Pen stylus and can multi-task better than a room full of women - Apple execs were last seen crying like babies in a Catalan bar.

Nunchops

£4.99 FROM IWOOT.COM

You never need turn your kitchen over in search of a chopstick again. This pair come chained together and in the style of Bruce Lee's favourite head cover.

EU Watches

£24.99 FROM FIREBOX.COM

Quite a crap name but these time-tellers do exactly what it suggests and some other digital watch shizzle you might expect, too. It's the immature slant on the design we like, so strap yours on and begin to add pieces from your favourite Danish building set. You could, with enough pieces, create quite a work of art on your wrist.

Skull Tidy

FROM £849 FROM SONY.CO.UK

If you stuff all your essentials in here - money, keys, mobile and the like (sunglasses essential) - will you be less likely to forget them if you whack the snooze button one time too many in the morning? If you don't think so, then give up all hope, go back to bed and stay there.

Dr Dre Pill Speaker

£169.95 FROM STORE.UNIVERSAL-MUSIC.CO.UK

Try taking this one with water and you'll be sorry - this Bluetooth speaker is a fine addition to your pad and connects to your enabled device to stream music beautifully over the airwaves. When a call comes in, it politely cuts the tunes out so you can get semi-serious for a few moments with your "working-at-home" voice before it's back to serious bass.

ADIZERO F50

£169 FROM ADIDAS.CO.UK

It's pretty simple really, these boots are worn by Lionel Messi, so what more do you need to know? The red stud represents the little man and the other ten studs are his team-mates. They are comfortable and make you feel like you are running faster. All in all, a top boot from the world's best bootmaker.

hipKey

£69.95 FROM APPLE

It's all too easy to leave shit behind but this gadget, paired up with your iPad/iPhone, will give you a beep if you wander too far away from yours. It also stops light-fingered wankers from wandering off with your device - put it in motion mode and its ear-crushing sound will let rip. We await version two, complete with a 10,000-volt Taser.